Doc Wallace on South 16th street has a Buff Jo mink which has a buffalo on each side.

Deputy Dale Spain will be the supervisor for the second floor of the Ryan building which is being remodeled for rental purposes for college students. He will have the front two-room apartment.

Nicky Ryan is fixing it up nice with an air conditioner in each room.

That was a suspicious bird that Jack Frost found. He took it back home and put it in a pond to spend the rest of his days or until a new subdivision routs him out to other climes.

We didn't know it but an Ostich's eyes weigh more than his brain. They act like it some times.

Down at Stue's Cafe the other morning there were two Old Crow trucks parked in front while the drivers were inside eating breakfast.

Chatter the cook asked the drivers. If they were passing out any samples.

They weren't but it started off the day with a laugh for everyone.

A well traveled alley in the one between Third and Four between Main and Walnut. This would be nice if it was paved.

We know the two astronauts were disappointed Thursday when the scheduled launch failed to take place. As far as we are concerned we would consider it a reprieve.

We like the terra firma as the old saying goes, the more firma the less terra.

The Western Kentucky Parkway took in $214,510 in July of this year. In July of 1964 it took in $175,605.

We have never worried about the turnpikes paying the way.

Four lane highways are a boon to people traveling long distances and they will be used.

The parkways as a whole took in $780,000 this July while in 1964 they took in a total of $675,100.

The four are Western Kentucky Parkway, Mountain Parkway, Turnpike, and the Shawnee Bridge.

We will say that the construction of these east-west highways, started under Governor Combs, constitutes a great move forward.

Dr. Ralph Woods and Professor W. O. Reed, both of the college were scheduled to address a two day briefing program on nuclear energy at Oak Ridge, Tennessee Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

It is surprising how nice people will be if you are nice to them.

Kentucky State Police Issues 100,436 Citations In Past Year

By CAROLE MARTIN
United Press International
FRANKFORT, Ky. (UP) — Last year Kentucky State Police issued 100,436 citations to motorists. Only 87 per cent of those drivers were convicted of traffic violations.

A conviction rate of 85 per cent is necessary for an effective traffic safety program, according to the National Safety Council and the Northwestern Traffic Institute.

Only seven of Kentucky's 120 counties met or bettered that standard last year, State Police Director J. E. Bassett said today with obvious concern.

"It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual's liberty," Bassett said, "but individual liberty includes the freedom to operate a motor vehicle without being killed or maimed by some irresponsible or drunken driver as well as the freedom to operate a motor vehicle without being unjustly arrested or imprisoned."

Wants Cooperation
Bassett, who feels the courts must cooperate with the police in the fight against traffic violations, said today.

Presidents' Day Planned For Monday

Mrs. William C. Nail, Jr., of Murray president of the First District of the Kentucky Congress of the Parent-Teacher Association, will preside at the school of instruction for all local unit presidents to be held Monday, August 23, at the Murray Woman's Club House.

The meeting will open at 10 a.m. Presidents are asked to bring a notebook and pencil, PTA Manual, by-law, the State Plan of Work sheets, and State Report Form sheets which are found in the President's packet.

Local PTA presidents will find this meeting very informative in the various phases of PTA work, Mrs. Nail said.

Breckinridge Reorganization Is Bad After Riot

By ROBERT ORNDORFF
United Press International

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (UP) — Officials of the federal Job Corps Center at nearby Camp Breckinridge today faced serious reorganization problems following a three-hour riot of hundreds of white and Negro trainees.

They searched, in addition, for a cause and cure for discontent that exploded Friday afternoon, bringing serious injuries to 10 youths and one staff member, Stuart Lovell, 30, Morganfield.

Dr. Robert MacVicar, vice president of Southern Illinois University which operates the center under the Office of Economic Opportunity, said in a prepared statement late Friday night. "We are expecting the situation to return to normal presently."

Earlier in the day he voiced a "cautious hope" the center could continue to operate.

The rioters' roll call was short by 140 to 150 students, he reported. These out of four following the riot, refused to stay overnight at the camp, SUC lodged them temporarily at hotels in Evansville, Ind., MacVicar said.

Staffers Also Leave
He had no immediate word on the number of staff members who had left.

Charles Singer, a member of the Security Staff at the camp, said students and teachers left for the same reason — fear.

"When you're a resident and you have 10 students gang up on you the way they did, you can see why you'd want to leave," Singer said.

"The camp's teaching organization, for the moment, is effectively gone," Singer said. "Things are calm, but things are a mess, too."

Singer could be no more precise than to say "A number of staff members" had apparently quit.

"They were threatened pretty heavily," he said. "Two of them just figured 'what the heck, I'll quit.'"

"The trainees were set up in an off-campus building, MacVicar said, because they are afraid to go back on post."

He told frightened youths, "We won't force you to stay, but why don't you go back and take a look?"

Wide Areas of Discontent
He said, after conferring with 200 youths following the riot, that trainees were dissatisfied with dormitory facilities, food, and "almost everything — from poor pay to the cafeteria to not enough girls."

MacVicar's answer to the general dissatisfaction was "We're not operating a Taj Mahal or even a Morganfield-Baltimore here... we're operating a school — a very special school."

Other camp officials voiced varying opinions as to the cause of the riot, but none were able to agree on a specific primary cause.

Center Director James Hughes said, "There were many reasons, but none was of a racial nature."

Ten Razor Blades Swallowed By Man

MEMPHIS (UP) — A 34-year-old yoga enthusiast was in fair condition at a hospital today after swallowing 10 razor blades.

Shelby County deputies reported Thomas B. Elbert, who was in jail here awaiting trial on charges of burglary, swallowed the blades, all wrapped in wax paper, while in his cell. He immediately complained of pains in his stomach and was taken to the hospital.

Sheriff's deputies said Elbert told them he religiously adhered to yoga practices and swallowed the blades in atonement for the burglary charge against him.

Hospital officials said several of the blades have lodged in the upper part of Elbert's abdomen, while others are in the lower section.

Beautiful Shot As Rocket Goes Into Orbit On 8-Day Space Trip

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.
United Press International

CAPE KENNEDY (UP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper and Charles Pete Conrad blasted off on their eight-day endurance space flight today on a Titan 2 rocket that thundered off the launch pad in a burst of smoke and hurled them perfectly into orbit.

It was a beautiful shot and it went off the pad without a hitch after the postponement Thursday caused by mechanical and weather problems.

"We're on our way," Cooper said at liftoff.

"You're looking good," reported ground control.

Trailing vapor from the 430,000 pounds of thrust in the first stage of the rocket, the Gemini 5 capsule was arched into a bright blue sky with this comment from Cooper who logged 34 hours in space in 1963.

"It's been a long time getting back."

Then: "What a beautiful view." This was Cooper talking.

"Looking good, Gemini 5," came the word from ground control as the capsule soared toward a maximum altitude of 200 miles on the first orbit.

"This is Gemini 5, we're going here," the space twins reported.

They headed toward completion of the first orbit at 11:36 a.m. EDT. There were 150 to go before splashdown in the Atlantic at 9:53 a.m. EDT, Sunday, Aug. 30.

The 216-mile "top" to the first orbit was a U.S. space altitude record, though below the 308-mile Russian mark.

The astronauts said a reading aboard the spacecraft indicated possible trouble with the main power supply for the ship's instruments.

However, mission control said it was "apparently a faulty reading" because the ground readings were okay.

The mission control spokesman said there is a backup power system, and "we believe on the ground that both systems were operating."

The 35-year-old Cooper and Conrad, three years his junior, calm and smiling, waved goodbye and climbed aboard the capsule a few minutes before the normal time, so smooth was the countdown.

A breakfast of orange juice, steak and eggs — last regular food they will eat until they come back to earth — fortified them for the work ahead.

"It looks fine up here," the triumphant astronaut reported as they shot into orbit.

The first big experiment was coming on the second orbit — with the release of a suitcase-sized "little rooster" rendezvous evaporation pod.

They would photograph it. Then on the 4th orbit they would try to nose within 20 feet of it, homing toward the device by radar.

The mighty two-stage rocket blasted off Launch Pad 19, precisely on time at 10 a.m. EDT with a burst of smoke and lifted into a bright blue sky.

"The clock is operating," said Cooper as the rocket lifted.

The second stage of the rocket took over 2 1/2 minutes after liftoff. The huge rocket trailed vapor high in the sky as it nosed upward and began arcing toward the "keyhole" to put it into the first of 131 orbits.

"Everything's go," declared the flight surgeon minutes after launch. Two minutes after liftoff the white rocket with its black capsule atop was lost from sight of watchers on the cape.

"Gemini 5, you are go, you are go!" the control center reported at Houston.

At 10:06 a.m. EDT, the capsule entered the first orbit, right on the nose. The computers at mission control figured the first orbit as a minimum of 99 miles and a maximum 200 miles in space.

Conrad began talking with astronaut James McDivitt on the ground.

It had been a flawless countdown, and, apparently, a beautiful shot, from all aspects.

Cooper triggered control rockets to separate the capsule from the second stage rocket. The burned-out booster stage went into orbit by itself, slightly behind the space capsule.

The orbit was achieved exactly 5 minutes, 58 seconds after ignition, and launch.

Radio transmission from the capsule was garbled for brief moments at about the time the second stage separated. It cleared up almost immediately, ground officials reported.

Ground control gave the mission a thumbs up.

American Forces See Communists Fleeing Chu Lai

By MICHAEL T. MALLOY
United Press International

SANCON (UP) — U.S. Air Force and Marine planes, taking up where the ground forces left off, sighted an estimated 400 Communists fleeing from Chu Lai late Friday and killed at least 55 of them. It was announced today.

The air strikes increased known Communist losses in this week's battle south of Chu Lai to 622 dead. A military spokesman said the figure is expected to go even higher as Marines explore the ruins of caved-in tunnels and foxholes on the battlefield.

Gen. Victor M. Krulak, U.S. Marine commander in the Pacific, told a news conference today that Marine casualties in the battle were one per cent killed and three per cent wounded.

Since a Marine regiment of 5,000 to 6,000 men was involved, the casualties figure out to about 50 dead and 150 wounded.

American warplanes ranged over North Viet Nam today, resuming operations which had been limited for a day or two by stormy weather.

Planes Inflict Damage
Ten Navy Skyhawks from the USS Coral Sea inflicted heavy damage on the Thanh Hoa army barracks 50 miles south of Hanoi.

Inside South Viet Nam, American Navy, Air Force and Vietnamese government planes flew more than 34 sorties against Viet Cong concentrations and supply areas. Pilots reported 35 Viet Cong guerrillas killed and almost 300 buildings destroyed or damaged.

On the ground, a troop of government rangers killed four Viet Cong guerrillas and captured 23 others during a search and destroy mission in Hau Nghia Province 20 miles northwest of Saigon. No government casualties were reported.

A military spokesman announced tonight that a ninth member of the U.S. Special Forces team whose camp at Dak Sui was overrun early Thursday by the Communists returned to safety.

Helicopter Rescue
Eight others were rescued by helicopter in the pre-dawn darkness Thursday. The ninth member walked out around noon today.

At his news conference, Krulak discounted reports that 1,000 Communists had been wounded in the Chu Lai fighting.

"Our idea of an enemy casualty is an enemy body counted," Krulak said. "We do not feel we have any right to estimate the number of enemy wounded."

"It's silly. You can't do it, and you shouldn't get caught trying."

The general said air and naval bombardment played an important part in the annihilation of the Communist forces.

He said U.S. losses were "proportionately light," but emphasized that the casualties are not being taken lightly.

"A dead Marine is a tragedy," the general said. "A wounded one is somewhat less of a tragedy."

Equation Not Possible
"You cannot equate flesh and blood with achievement in terms of the inspiration that this victory has given our side or the damage it has done to the enemy."

Krulak who was on an inspection tour of Marine positions in South Viet Nam when the Chu Lai attack was launched Tuesday, held his news conference in the war room of Marine headquarters at the Big Da Nan airbase.

The general sat at a blanketed table while he talked to newsmen.

He said the Marines beat the Communists to the punch by 24 hours when they charged ashore at Von Tuong. Red prisoners told U.S. interrogators that the Communists had prepared a sand-box model of Marine positions at Chu Lai in preparation for an attack at 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Charges Made Against Local Man By Sheriff

William Earl Jackson of 506 South Sixth Street has been charged by the Calloway County Sheriff's office with three counts after being picked up by Deputy Sheriff Dale Spain yesterday afternoon in a certified in front of the Dowdy's Truck Shop on US 631 South.

Spain said he was called to the Truck Shop after Jackson had allegedly been involved in an automobile accident. Spain said Jackson had reportedly forced another car off the road and hit an highway engineering sign shattering it to pieces on the highway.

Max Churchill had been called to the scene before Spain and it is reported that Churchill with the help of some more men had subdued Jackson but he had broken loose.

When Spain arrived the men again subdued Jackson and Spain handcuffed him. He was brought to the Murray-Calloway County Hospital where he is reported to be in fair condition this morning.

Charges against Jackson are operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor, operating a motor vehicle while he was not in possession of a valid operator's license, and breach of the peace in that he resisted arrest, according to the Sheriff's office.

Minister Voices Fear Over Trends

By LOUIS GANDELA

Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, professor of religion at Stanford University, is one of Protestantism's most "relevant" young theologians.

He has been deeply involved in the ecumenical movement, and served as a Protestant observer at the Vatican Council.

He was one of the first clergymen to go to jail for participating in a civil rights demonstration in Mississippi.

No one has ever accused him of being a hide-bound conservative.

When such a man becomes alarmed by trends in contemporary Protestant theology, it cannot be shrugged off as the murmuring of a mousetail.

Dr. Brown voices his concern in the preface to a new paperback edition of his book, "The Spirit of Protestantism."

Minister Voices Fear Over Trends

By LOUIS GANDELA

Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, professor of religion at Stanford University, is one of Protestantism's most "relevant" young theologians.

He has been deeply involved in the ecumenical movement, and served as a Protestant observer at the Vatican Council.

He was one of the first clergymen to go to jail for participating in a civil rights demonstration in Mississippi.

No one has ever accused him of being a hide-bound conservative.

When such a man becomes alarmed by trends in contemporary Protestant theology, it cannot be shrugged off as the murmuring of a mousetail.

Dr. Brown voices his concern in the preface to a new paperback edition of his book, "The Spirit of Protestantism."
